

FBI Office of the Private Sector

The Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) has field office staff dedicated to assisting private sector businesses with issues related to cybercrime.

When to Contact the FBI

A relationship between your business and the private sector coordinator at the local FBI field office can foster information sharing that proves beneficial both to potential victim organizations and law enforcement. RH-ISAC advises members and partner organizations to make contact with the local FBI field office to establish a relationship with the personnel there prior to needing to report a cybercrime incident. Having an introductory phone call or meeting for a cup of coffee can help facilitate a response to a cybercrime crisis incident if it happens to your business.

FBI Contacts

To determine your FBI contact, find the state where your business is located on the chart below (continued on page 2). Larger states have multiple FBI field offices, so select the one closest to your location.
